

Recusal of Judges

❖ Context

- Recently former Supreme Court judge Justice M.R. Shah refused to recuse himself from hearing ex-IPS officer Sanjiv Bhatt's plea for additional evidence in his appeal against conviction in a 1990 custodial death case at the Gujarat High Court.

❖ Reasons for Judges to Recuse:

- Potential conflict of interest: Judges may withdraw from a case to avoid the perception of bias due to personal or financial associations with a party or entity involved.
- Prior involvement: Judges recuse themselves when an appeal is filed against their own previous judgment, following the principle of "no person shall be a judge in their own case."
- Upholding due process: The principle of "justice must not only be done but must also be seen to be done" necessitates judges to recuse to maintain transparency and fairness in the judicial process.

❖ The Procedure for Recusal:

- Automatic or plea-based: Recusals can occur when judges voluntarily withdraw or when a party raises a plea, highlighting the possibility of bias or personal interest.
- Judge's discretion: The decision to recuse lies solely with the judge, and no party can compel a judge to withdraw.
- Recusal and case transfer: If a judge recuses, the case is typically reassigned to an alternate bench under the Chief Justice's authority.
- Lack of codified rules: India lacks codified rules governing recusals, relying on judicial pronouncements and precedents to address recusal issues.

❖ Recording Reasons for Recusal:

- Discretionary recording: Judges may choose to specify reasons for recusal through oral statements in open court or by issuing a written order.
 - Lack of transparency: Often, reasons for recusal are not disclosed, leading to criticism regarding judicial transparency, particularly in cases of mass recusals.
 - Varying judicial practices: Some judges provide explicit reasons, while others may leave the reasons speculative, highlighting the need for procedural rules in recusal pleas.
- ### ❖ Foreign Jurisdictions:
- U.S. laws on recusals: The U.S. has well-defined laws, outlining grounds for disqualification of judges based on financial interest, material witness status, or relationship to a party.
 - U.K. law on recusals: The U.K. adopts the "real danger" test, considering substantive evidence of bias, although criticism has been raised regarding the burden of proving actual bias.
